The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population of the country is of African descent. This is a result of the fact that the country was colonized by Portugal in the 16th century, and the Portuguese brought with them a large number of African slaves. These slaves were used on the plantations and in the mines, and their descendants formed the bulk of the population of the country.

The second of these is the fact that the country has a long history of racial discrimination. This is a result of the fact that the Portuguese, who were the dominant race in the country, looked down on the African population. This discrimination was based on race, and it was not until the 19th century that it began to change.

The third of these is the fact that the country has a long history of social inequality. This is a result of the fact that the Portuguese, who were the dominant race in the country, owned the land and the mines, and they kept the African population in a state of poverty. This inequality was based on race, and it was not until the 19th century that it began to change.
